of real fighting any meeting between big men in months. Both are game, fairly clever boxers, and can deliver a knockout blow with either hand. Best of all, they are what are termed "willing fight--men who often throw caution to the wind in their endeavors to land a finishing blow. No fancy boxing for theirs—slug, slug, slug is all.

This will be the second meeting of the

After the fight Hart went to his farm, about thirty miles from Louisville, and gave his "big mitt" a chance to knit together. His recent victory over "Kid" Carter shows that it is in good condi-tion. Gardner, after this fight, whipped Jack Root in decisive style, and then at-tempted to take the measure of Robert Fitzsimmons. The result is pugilistic history. He failed miserably. He wants another chance at Fitz, but has wisely concluded that he must whip men like Hart before the public will place any faith in his prowess. If he should knock out the rugged plumber from the "Dark and Bloody Ground," it would advance his stock considerably. That ungainly plumber has such men as "Kid" Carter, Tommy West, Jack O'Brien Jack Bonner, and their like on his !ist of victims.

Hart will weigh more than Gardner if the Lowell man strips at his usual fighting weight of 173 pounds, for the scales balance for Hart at about 185 pounds.

Gardner will be a slight favorite. It is hardly probable the contest will go the full limit of fifteen rounds. It it does, Gardner appears to have the best chance. Hart must win a knockout, for his natural strength and thorough gameness will not overcome Gardner's superior cleverness and ring generalship in a contest where a referee decides on points,

If it should be a clean-cut victory for

If it should be a clean-cut victory for Gardner he will be after Fitzsimmons, and if the fortunes of war are with Hart he, too, will likely solicit a set-to with the old fellow who once had an assortment of championships.

Too many changes never made a pennant winner; in fact, just the reverse. There is nothing like an evenly matched lot of teams to make money.

The Wisconsin owner of the American champions spiked a story that he wanted to sell out: "Right after the season," said he, "I received a setter asking me if the Boston Club was for sale. I answered emphatically that it was not. That ended the matter. It was the only inquiry I ever had, and the only response I ever made."

"Sometimes when I hear managers talk," mused a Quaker philosopher, "I do not wonder why their teams finish so low. Once in a while you'll hear a jealous fellow roast Ned Hanlon. For me, I'd rather have a $10,000 manager and a $70,000 team."

and a $70,000 team."

Conny Mack's Athletics won a penmant in 1902 and drew smaller salaries and greater crowds than any team in either American or National Leagues. President P. T. Powers has not been invited to send a committee to the joint rules convention, and the chances are that Mr. Powers will issue a notice in due time saying under which rules the minor leagues will play next season. As the minors cover the field from one end of the country to the other, they will play quite an important part in the spreading of playing rules.

Several Bets Made at 10 to 8 on Champion.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 26.-As the time for their championship battle draws near, "Young Corbett" and Eddle Hanlon, who are to fight for the feathrweight championship next Tuesday night, grow stronger in confidence Both have stopped hard work, and are devoting their time to gaining speed and adding to their qualities of endurance. Hanlon weighed at noon yesterday 130 pounds-one pound more than the articles of agreement for Tuesday evening's engagement call for. Corbett is heavier than his opponent, weighing 1321/2 pounds. The one or two ands overweight do not worry either of the men, as they can reach the required figure with a few hours' work. Hanlon has for the last day or two abandoned the boxing part of his daily routine. He carries about with him a pair of eyes that are vari-colored. Both are proof that his trainers have landed on him and hard, too. The glove work between Hanlon and his men has been particularly for the state of the st

To please the newspaper men he went through a course for the boys here yesterday, and after going through his varied exercises, weighed in, showing his weight his sparring partner, smashed the bag and fought a few "shadows," using light dumbbells at this work.

The odds on the fight are gradually becoming settled. The champion now ranges a 10 to 8 favorite over Hanlon Several good bets were made at this figure. But as there is lots of money here ready to be placed on both fighters the betting men are waiting until the last moment to make their bets, hoping for more favorable odds. It is not likely, however, that the betting will shift much-not more than half a point, if

A number of Eastern sporting men have arrived here, and are eager for Tuesday night's contest.

Wir.s From Centrals of Monumental City.

The Washington Y. M. C. A. score a signal victory over the Central Y. M. C. A., c. Baltimore, in the local asso-ciation gymnasium last night, by the total of 24 to 14. It was one of the fast-est and cleanest basketball games seen in this city for some time. The local boys excelled in open play, while those from the Monumental City were best in throwing baskets.

For the Washington boys, Craig and Pumper excelled in throwing baskets. Bopp threw more baskets than Pumper, but the latter's play on the defensive was much the better. The Baltimore boys and the Washingtonlans have engaged in an intercity series for the past four years, and so far the Washington boys have won two more games than their rivals.
